Architecture Now! 4

By:Tyler Desvignes

Here is where I read my book, The Mosaic House Café in Prague
I was staying here as it's also a hotel with their own library

The book is a showcase of fascinating architecture in the 2000s

I would highly recommend those with a taste for architecture and interested in a sort of recent history of the craft to read this book. The 2000s are often overlooked in architecture because it wasn't very long ago, however this is rather shortsighted as it seems that decade has set the state for almost everything being done now.

Here's my favorite quote from the book's author Philip Jodidio:

"Architecture has broken out of the box, literally and figuratively. New technologies in design and construction have at last begun to utterly transform the built environment."
